POETICAL.

THE RAVEN.

BY EDGAR A. POE.

Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered, weak and weary,
Over many a quaint and curious volume of forgotten lore—
While I nodded, nearly napping, suddenly there came a tapping,
As of some one gently rapping, rapping at my chamber door.
"'Tis some visiter," I muttered, "tapping at my chamber door—
Only this and nothing more."

Ah, distinctly I remember it was in the bleak December;
And each separate dying ember wrought its ghost upon the floor.
Eagerly I wished the morrow;—vainly I had sought to borrow
From my books surcease of sorrow—sorrow for the lost Lenore—
For the rare and radiant maiden whom the angels name Lenore—
Nameless here for evermore.

And the silken, sad, uncertain rustling of each purple curtain
Thrilled me—filled me with fantastic terrors never felt before;
So that now, to still the beating of my heart, I stood repeating
"'Tis some visiter entreating entrance at my chamber door—
Some late visiter entreating entrance at my chamber door;—
This it is and nothing more."

Presently my soul grew stronger; hesitating then no longer,
"Sir," said I "or Madam, truly your forgiveness I implore;
But the fact is I was napping, and so gently you came rapping,
And so faintly you came tapping, tapping at my chamber door,
That I scarce was sure I heard you"—here I opened wide the door;—
Darkness there and nothing more.

Deep into that darkness peering, long I stood there wondering, fearing,
Doubting, dreaming dreams no mortal ever dared to dream before;
But the silence was unbroken, and the stillness gave no token,
And the only word there spoken was the whispered word, "Lenore?"
This I whisped, and an echo murmured back the word, "Lenore!"
Merely this and nothing more.

Back into the chamber turning, all my soul within me burning,
Soon again I heard a tapping somewhat louder than before.
"Surely," said I, "surely that is something at my window lattice;
Let me see, then, what thereat is, and this mystery explore—
Let my heart be still a moment and this mystery explore;—
'Tis the wind and nothing more!"

Open here I flung the shutter, when, with many a flirt and flutter,
In there stepped a stately Raven of the saintly days of yore;
Not the least obeisance made he; not a minute stopped or stayed he;
But, with mien of lord or lady, perched above my chamber door—
Perched upon a bust of Pallas just above my chamber door—
Perched, and sat, and nothing more.

Then this ebony bird beguiling my sad fancy into smiling,
By the grave and stern decorum of the countenance it wore.
"Though thy crest be shorn and shaven, thou," I said, "art sure no craven,
Ghastly grim and ancient Raven, wandering from the Nightly shore—
Tell me what thy lordly name is on the Night's Plutonian shore!"
Quoth the Raven "Nevermore."

Much I marvelled this ungainly fowl to hear discourse so plainly,
Though its answer little meaning—little relevancy bore;
For we cannot help agreeing that no living human being
Ever yet was blessed with seeing bird above his chamber door—
Bird or beast upon the sculptured bust above his chamber door,
With such name as "Nevermore."

But the Raven, sitting lonely on the placid bust, spoke only
That one word, as if his soul in that word he did outpour.
Nothing farther then he uttered—not a feather then he fluttered—
Till I scarcely more than muttered "Other friends have flown before—
On the morrow he will leave me, as my Hopes have flown before."
Then the bird said "Nevermore."

Startled at the stillness broken by reply so aptly spoken,
"Doubtless," said I, "what it utters is its only stock and store
Caught from some unhappy master whom unmerciful Disaster
Followed fast and followed faster till his songs one burden bore—
Till the dirges of his Hope that melancholy burden bore
Of 'Never—nevermore.'"

But the Raven still beguiling my sad fancy into smiling,
Straight I wheeled a cushioned seat in front of bird, and bust and door;
Then, upon the velvet sinking, I betook myself to linking
Fancy unto fancy, thinking what this ominous bird of yore—
What this grim, ungainly, ghastly, gaunt, and ominous bird of yore
Meant in croaking "Nevermore."

This I sat engaged in guessing, but no syllable expressing
To the fowl whose fiery eyes now burned into my bosom's core;
This and more I sat divining, with my head at ease reclining
On the cushion's velvet lining that the lamp light gloated o'er,
But whose velvet-violet lining with the lamp-light gloating o'er,
She shall press, ah, nevermore!

Then, methought, the air grew denser, perfumed from an unseen censer
Swung by seraphim whose foot-falls tinkled on the tufted floor.
"Wretch," I cried, "thy God hath lent thee—by these angels he hath sent thee
Respite—respite and nepenthe from thy memories of Lenore;
Quaff, oh quaff this kind nepenthe and forget this lost Lenore!"
Quoth the Raven "Nevermore."

"Prophet!" said I, "thing of evil!—prophet still, if bird or devil!—
Whether Tempter sent, or whether tempest tossed thee here ashore,
Desolate yet all undaunted, on this desert land enchanted—
On this home by Horror haunted—tell me truly, I implore—
Is there—is there balm in Gilead!—tell me—tell me, I implore!"
Quoth the Raven "Nevermore."

"Prophet!" said I, "thing of evil!—prophet still, if bird or devil!
By that Heaven that bends above us—by that God we both adore—
Tell this soul with sorrow laden if, within the distant Aidenn,
It shall clasp a sainted maiden whom the angels name Lenore—
Clasp a rare and radiant maiden whom the angels name Lenore."
Quoth the Raven "Nevermore."

"Be that word our sign of parting, bird or fiend!" I shrieked, upstarting—
"Get thee back into the tempest and the Night's Plutonian shore!
Leave no black plume as a token of that lie thy soul hath spoken!
Leave my loneliness unbroken!—quit the bust above my door!
Take thy beak from out my heart, and take thy form from off my door!"
Quoth the Raven "Nevermore."

And the Raven, never flitting, still is sitting, still is sitting
On the pallid bust of Pallas just above my chamber door;
And his eyes have all the seeming of a demon's that is dreaming,
And the lamp-light o'er him streaming throws his shadow on the floor;
And my soul from out that shadow that lies floating on the floor
Shall be lifted—nevermore!

AGRICULTURAL.

ROOT CROPS.

A correspondent of an English paper writes: As I have been a grower and consumer of roots for some few years, (especially carrots,) I would therefore in answer to your correspondent, give what little information I can, all derived from experience. In the first place I think there is no root ever yet introduced that will produce so great an amount of fattening properties per acre as the carrot. I believe there is no corn or hay, or oil cake or linseed, that will fatten any horse or bullock so soon and so completely as the carrot given in its raw state. Horses, however poor, (if healthy,) will get fat in a few weeks with carrots only. No hay, no water—in fact, they will not drink if you feed entirely on carrots. Now, as to quantity, if you wish only to fatten, let them eat as many as they like; but one bushel per day, with hay, will keep your cart horses and nags in good working order, without any corn; and two bushels per day will fatten them while working, without any hay or corn. There is no fear of griping them, as I believe the carrot quite free from any propensity that will produce that effect. I have two horses that are wintering upon carrots and hay. They have forty pounds of carrots weighed to them, and about eight pounds of hay, and they thrive wonderfully upon it. I am such an advocate for carrot cultivation that I should like to see every farmer in England with some acres every year. I think also it is the most profitable crop to grow for sale, for I believe it is quite possible to grow fifty tons to the acre. Several gentlemen have told me they have thirty tons to the acre this year. Perhaps we have not had so propitious a year for a long time; not only the quantity and quality of the carrot is great and good, but the mere cultivation is like subsoiling the land, and it improves the soil for any kind of corn after it. I generally grow the white Belgian and Altringham, but I think the short carrot called the "early horn" will grow the greatest weight per acre.—Farmer and Mechanic.

PRUNING.

Summer pruning is sometimes necessary. In order to give form and proper direction to nursery trees, and standard trees may need thinning in order to expose the fruit to light and air. Grape vines may need thinning, owing to a want of sufficient pruning in the spring or last fall. But in pruning trees thoroughly, particularly if large limbs are to be cut off, it is best to defer the business till the last of July, August, or the former part of September.

Late in summer and early in autumn, the bark does not peel as it does early in the summer, when it often starts from the tree which is injured, by going into trees and stepping on limbs with hard shoes. The sap will ooze out of some trees early in summer, which not only injures them generally, but it often causes the wounded part to decay.

But in late pruning, the wood, when the branch is cut off, becomes sound and well seasoned; and though it may not heal over so readily as when cut early in summer or spring, it remains in a healthy state. This is the main consideration. What would it avail for a surgeon to heal a wound at the surface, while it was festering at the bottom?

Late in summer and early in fall is not only the most favorable season for the benefit of trees, but it is a convenient and pleasant season for the operation.—N. E. Farmer.

RENT OF FARMS IN ENGLAND.

Mr. Colman, of Boston, who has published a book, giving an account of his travels through the agricultural districts of England, makes the following statements in regard to the rent and value of certain farms in Great Britain:

On page 67, vol. 1, he speaks of a Mr. Oliver, who pays $5000 per annum for his farm, on a lease of 19 years. "The tables," he says, "of some tenant farms, who are men of wealth, are covered with silver, and furnished with wines of the most costly character. They took me to visit the farm of Mr. Hope, in their neighborhood, who also is a tenant, and who has made a fortune of sixty thousand pounds, or three hundred thousand dollars, by farming."—Ib., 262. "One farmer had paid a rent of £7000, or $35,000 per year. The farmers here are exceedingly rich and intelligent, in all that concerns their profession. One of the farms on this route (Scotland) recently sold for £63,000, or $315,000, cash. I believe it contains not over five or six hundred acres."—Ibid, 72. "On Friday I went to a farm, where the farmer pays about $10,000, or £2000, and he and his two brothers, in the immediate neighborhood of each other, had more than three hundred people engaged in harvesting and threshing. I went into a cottage, where one of the laborers told me, he had lived on the farm more than fifty years; and another told me he had been there sixty years. I wonder what our laborers would say to such keeping as the Scotch laborers have, eat porridge and skim milk or butter-milk for breakfast, a pound of bread and a bottle of small beer at noon, and supper like breakfast at night, without lunch or any thing else of any kind, and a smiling a day for their labor."

BEES.

Mr. Editor:—Though for the first time, I must number myself among those of your correspondents who love honey, and the trouble of bees. I take a great delight in waiting upon so industrious and brave an insect.

Hives that bees are put in should be very tight, so close as to prevent the worm from getting in. Persons are generally careless about putting on the top. I oftentimes see the top fit so badly as to allow the worm space to get in. I have seen the worm in his web, only waiting to get his growth to crawl in and detroy the hive. I have always found less trouble in hiving bees in a planed and tight hive; they seem to be aware of their danger in an open hive.

When bees are put in hives the second time, owners are apt to hive the egg of the fly with them. The comb that is left in the hives will draw th fly; the egg is deposited in the hive, and hatch after the bees are put in, and will destroy them in a short time. All bee hives lost early in the summer or in the last spring month, are killed in this way. The old hives should be cleansed of all the old comb before they are put away, and when taken from your barns or other places where they have been stored awy to use the second time, should be held over a fire until the hive becomes heated; then a round shave should be used to take off all the smoke and coal that the fire has made upon the hive. A less troublesome plan, though not so good, is to pour boiling water in the hive. If the hive is constructed with sliding boards, or be stopped top and bottom; with a hole bored near the top under the box in the hive, (which most persons use to save trouble in robbing,) and then be suspended, we will find the fly of little trouble. The best mode of suspending hives is to to drive up posts the width of the hives, nail strips of plank upon the posts and nail ears upon the hives, and slip them between the strips of plank; make a mark around the posts with chalk, or tie batted cotton around the posts to prevent the ants from getting into the hives. Persons should always rub their bees before the chestnut and chinquepin blossoms put out, as they will make the honey so bitter as not to be eatable.

Respectfully yours,

M. T. C.

SPLENDID SKY-LIGHT ELECTRO DAGUERROTYPES.

An Extraordinary Improvement.

THE SUBSCRIBER begs leave to call the attention of the public to his new Daguerrian Gallery, which he has just completed, and furnished in good style, with an improved SKY-LIGHT, the largest South of the Potomac, and so constructed as to graduate the light to any degree necessary to ensure a perfect likeness.

Mr. W. having successfully applied ELECTRICITY to his former process of making Daguerreotypes, is now enabled to get the action of Light on the subject, almost instantly, so as to catch even the most vivid expressions of infancy. This is a great desideratum, as it does away with the heretofore long and tedious sitting, which rendered it almost impossible to keep the mobility of features. These Likenesses are far superior in point of beauty and life-like expression, to any heretofore produced, as the colours are permanently preserved, and the picture can be seen in any light.

Mr. W. would beg leave to say, that he was one of the first to fit up skylight, for Daguerrian purposes, and being one of the first that introduced the profession in this country, and his access, both North and South, particularly in Richmond and Norfolk, where he has received almost unlimited patronage, for the last six years, which has enabled him to employ, constantly, thirteen assistants, and he is now taking annually from five to six thousand Likenesses, which he deems a sufficient guarantee of the superiority of his Daguereotypes.

Particular attention paid to the taking of likenesses of infant Children, Corpses, copying of Paintings, Daguerreotypes, &c. Great Depot of Daguerreotype Materials at the Richmond Gallery, and for sale at New York prices.

A call is most respectfully solicited, whether you sit for a likeness or not. J. H. WHITEHURST, Proprietor.

Call east side Main street, a few doors above Franklin Hotel, Lynchburg; 77 Main street, Richmond; South Main street, Norfolk; and West Sycamore street, Petersburg.

P. S.—Mr. W. respectfully offers a Premium, to any Daguerreotypeist, who will produce an advertisement, purporting to make Daguerreotypes by the ELECTRO GALVANIC PROCESS, prior to his own, in September last.

Valuable James River Estate for sale.

BY VIRTUE of a decree of the Circuit Court of Chesterfield, of the 3d of April, 1847, amended by two other decrees, one made on the 13th July, 1847, and the other on the 29th March, 1849, in the suit of David C. Winfree, &c., against Lucy Winfree and others, the Plantation on James River, in the County of Buckingham, belonging to the estate of James W. Winfree, dec'd, will be offered for sale by public auction, on the premises, on THURSDAY, THE 18th OCTOBER NEXT, if fair, if not, the next fair day. The plantation contains by survey of which there are estimated to be about 600 acres of open arable land, including about 150 acres of river, and a small portion of creek low grounds. The residue of the land is in woods, and much of it well timbered. Nearly all the open land is in a high state of improvement from the use of clover and plaster, and is well adapted to the growth of tobacco, corn, wheat and oats. There is a GRIST MILL on the place; and a site on which there has been a Saw Mill, the dam now standing in good repair. The mill may be rebuilt at a moderate cost, and rendered very profitable. The plantation adjoins the lands of Ro. Bolling, John and James Harris, Henry and Lorenzo Nicholas and others, and is about 5 miles from Scottsville, and 8 miles from the Virginia Mills. Produce may be carried across the river to the canal without any hauling on the opposite side. It is well watered, by two creeks running entirely through it, and by a number of springs convenient to it. It is situated. There are a good orchard, and all necessary tobacco houses, barns, &c., with a small dwelling and an overseer's house. The purchaser will receive possession of the land, now in crop, as soon as the crops can be properly gathered and removed, and will take full possession on the 1st January next.

THE TERMS ARE—one-fourth cash; and a credit of one, two and three years, equal instalments, for the residue—the credit payments to bear interest from the sale, and to be secured by bonds with good security, and by retaining the title until payment.

We are authorized to say, that it is not the intention of any of the persons now interested in the estate to purchase it.

LUCY WINFREE, }
JNO. J. BROWN, } Com'rs.

At the same time and place, I shall sell all the stock of every kind, consisting of horses, mules, oxen, milch cows, young cattle, sheep and hogs; also, the crop of corn, oats, shucks, straw, &c.; together with all the plantation utensils of every kind. Terms—For all sums of ten dollars and over, a credit of six months will be given, the purchaser giving bond with approved
