THE RAVEN.

BY EDGAR A. POE, ESQ.

[The following lines from a correspondent—besides the deep quaint strain of the sentiment, and the curious introduction of some ludicrous touches amidst the serious and impressive, as was doubtless intended by the author—appear to us one of the most felicitous specimens of unique rhyming which has for some time met our eye. The resources of English rhythm for varieties of melody, measure, and sound, producing corresponding diversities of effect, have been thoroughly studied, much more perceived by very few poets in the language.—While the classic tongues, especially the Greek, possess by power of accent, several advantages for versification over our own, chiefly through greater floundance of spondaic feet, we have other and very great advantages of sound by the modern sage of rhyme. Alliteration is nearly the only effect of that kind which the ancients had in common with us. It will be seen that much of the melody of "The Raven" arises from alliteration, and the studious use of similar sounds in unusual places. In regard to its measure, it may be noted that if all the verses were like the second, they might properly be placed merely in short lines, producing a not uncommon form; but the presence in all the others of one line—mostly the second in the verse—which flows continuously, with only an aspirate pause in the middle, like that before the short line in the Sapphic Adonic, while the fifth has at the middle pause no similarity of sound with any part beside, gives the versification an entirely different effect. We could wish the capacities of our noble language, in prosody, were better understood.—[Ed. Am. Review.]

Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered, weak and weary,
Over many a quaint and curious volume of forgotten lore,
While I nodded, nearly napping, suddenly there came a tapping,
As of some one gently rapping, rapping at my chamber door.
"'Tis some visiter," I muttered, "tapping at my chamber door—
Only this, and nothing more."

Ah, distinctly I remember it was in the bleak December,
And each separate dying ember wrought its ghost upon the floor.
Eagerly I wished the morrow;—vainly I had tried to borrow
From my books surcease of sorrow—sorrow for the lost
Lenore—
For the rare and radiant maiden whom the angels name Lenore—
Nameless here for evermore.

And the silken and uncertain rustling of each purple curtain
Thrilled me—filled me with fantastic terrors never felt before;
So that now, to still the beating of my heart, I stood repeating
"'Tis some visitor entreating entrance at my chamber door—
Some late visitor entreating entrance at my chamber door;—
This it is, and nothing more."

Presently my soul grew stronger; hesitating then no longer,
"Sir," said I, "or Madam, truly your forgiveness I implore;
But the fact is I was napping, and so gently you came rapping,
And so faintly you came tapping, tapping at my chamber door,
That I scarce was sure I heard you"—here I opened wide the door;—
Darkness there, and nothing more.

Deep into that darkness peering, long I stood there wondering, fearing,
Doubting, dreaming dreams no mortal ever dared to dream
before;
But the silence was unbroken, and the darkness gave no token,
And the only word there spoken was the whispered word,
"Lenore!"
This I whispered, and an echo murmured back the word,
"Lenore!"
Merely this, and nothing more.

Then into the chamber turning, all my soul within me burning,
Soon I heard again a tapping somewhat louder than before.
"Surely," said I, "surely that is something at my window lattice;
Let me see, then, what thereat is, and this mystery explore—
Let my heart be still a moment and this mystery explore;—
'Tis the wind, and nothing more!"

Open here I flung the shutter, when, with many a flirt and flutter,
In there stepped a stately raven of the saintly days of yore;
Not the least obeisance made he; nor an instant stopped or stayed he;
But, with mien of lord or lady, perched above my chamber
door—
Perched upon a bust of Pallas just above my chamber door—
Perched, and sat, and nothing more.

Then this ebony bird beguiling my sad fancy into smiling,
By the grave and stern decorum of the countenance it wore,
"Though thy crest be shorn and shaven, thou," I said, "art sure no craven,
Ghastly grim and ancient raven wandering from the Nightly
shore—
Tell me what thy lordly name is on the Night's Plutonian
shore!"
Quoth the raven, "Nevermore."

Much I marveled this ungainly fowl to hear discourse so plainly,
Though its answer little meaning—little relevancy bore;
For we cannot help agreeing that no sublunary being Ever yet was blessed with seeing bird above his chamber door—
Bird or beast upon the sculptured bust above his chamber door,
With such a name as "Nevermore."

But the raven, sitting lonely on the placid bust, spoke only
That one word, as if his soul in that one word he did outpour.
Nothing farther then he uttered—not a feather then he fluttered—
Till I scarcely more than muttered, "other friends have flown
before—
On the morrow he will leave me, as my hopes have flown
before."
Quoth the raven, "Nevermore."

Wondering at the stillness broken by reply so aptly spoken.
"Doubtless," said I, "what it utters is its only stock and store,
Caught from some unhappy master whom unmerciful Disaster Followed fast and followed faster—so, when Hope he would adjure,
Stern Despair returned, instead of the sweet Hope he dared
adjure—
That sad answer, "Nevermore!"

But the raven still beguiling all my sad soul into smiling,
Straight I wheeled a cushioned seat in front of bird, and bust,
and door;
Then upon the velvet sinking, I betook myself to linking Fancy unto fancy, thinking what this ominous bird of yore—
What this grim, ungainly, ghastly, gaunt, and ominous bird of yore
Meant in croaking "Nevermore."

Thus I sat engaged in guessing, but no syllable expressing
To the fowl whose fiery eyes now burned into my bosom's core;
This and more I sat divining, with my head at ease reclining
On the cushion's velvet lining that the lamplight gloated o'er,
But whose velvet violet lining with the lamplight gloating o'er,
She shall press, ah, nevermore!

Then, methought, the air grew denser, perfumed from an unseen censor
Swung by angels whose faint foot-falls tinkled on the tufted floor.
"Wretch," I cried, "thy God hath lent thee—by these angels
he hath sent thee
Respite—respite and Nepenthe from thy memories of Lenore!
Let me quaff this kind Nepenthe and forget this lost Lenore!"
Quoth the raven "Nevermore."

"Prophet," said I, "thing of evil!—prophet still, if bird or devil!—
Whether Tempter sent, or whether tempest tossed thee here ashore,
Desolate, yet all undaunted, on this desert land enchanted—
On this home by Horror haunted—tell me truly, I implore—
Is there—is there balm in Gilead?—tell me—tell me, I implore!"
Quoth the raven, "Nevermore."

"Prophet," said I, "thing of evil!—prophet still, if bird or devil!
By that Heaven which bends above us—by that God we both adore—
Tell this soul with sorrow laden, if, within the distant Aidenn,
It shall clasp a sainted maiden whom the angels name Lenore—
Clasp a rare and radiant maiden whom the angels name Lenore.',
Quoth the raven, "Nevermore.',

"Be that word our sign of parting, bird or fiend!" I shrieked, upstarting—
"Get the back into the tempest and the Night's Plutonian
shore!
Leave no black plume as a token of that lie thy soul hath spoken!
Leave my loneliness unbroken!—quit the bust above my door!
Take thy beak from out my heart, and take thy form from off my door!"
Quoth the raven, "Nevermore."

And the raven, never flitting, still is sitting, still is sitting
On the pallid bust of Pallas just above my chamber door;
And his eyes have all the seeming of a demon that is dreaming,
And the lamp-light o'er him streaming throws his shadow on the floor;
And my soul from out that shadow that lies floating on the floor
Shall be lifted—nevermore!

THE LATE DR. GEORGE MCCLELLAN.—A thousand anecdotes are related of the late eminent scholar and philanthropist, Dr. Geo. McClellan. The memory of his great talents and goodness lingers like a charm upon the public mind, and hardly a day passes that we do not hear some welcome mention of the virtues, coupled with sincere regret that he was not longer spared to the world.

On one occasion he was called to perform a critical and painful operation upon the mother of his friend, the late Dr R. He came a day before the appointed time.

"Well, George," said the old lady, "will you come to-morrow?"

"Let me see," he hastily replied, "to-morrow—I shall be busy to-morrow—must go to New York—great deal to do—how do you feel to-day—must put this operation off I fear."

"Oh I am very thankful," said she, "for I dread it."

"Pooh—it's nothing—work of a moment—no danger—let me see the breast. (It was cancer.)

"No, George, no; next week."

"But I must examine it now, you know."

"You won't hurt me."

"Certainly not."

"Let me pray first," said the old lady imploringly.

"I cannot wait—come—come."

"Only five minutes, George—only five."

"No—no—not one;—come, be seated," and in a few minutes he accomplished the operation most successfully. "There," said he, "if I had permitted you to do as you wished, you would have been praying all this time."

A stranger from the South sent for him to take a tumor from his tongue.

He called upon the patient at the U. S. Hotel, and was shown to his room.

"Let me see your tongue," said the surgeon. After a brief inspection he said he would call again, and wished the gentleman good morning, closing the door after him.—In an instant, however, he returned. "Let me look at your tongue once more," he said, and in a moment, the tumor was off.

"What the deuce are you about?" sputtered the patient, with his mouth full of blood.

"Merely removing a large tumor," replied the skilful surgeon.

"I won't be operated on to-day!"

"It's off, sir," said the surgeon.

"It is'nt off already, is it? I expected to go through a course of medicine."

"And die under the operation, perhaps," replied McClellan, wishing his patient a very good morning.

A young lady of our acquaintance ran a fine cambric needle into her thigh, and he was called in to extract it. She had carefully prepared a slit in her garments, at which the doctor laughed heartily. "Why, that will never do," said he, "all modesty must be thrown aside for this occasion! Here doctor B., assist me," and in a twinkling the needle was taken from its hiding place.

On leaving his house one morning, he saw a little boy, who was crying bitterly. "What is the matter, my lad—don't cry," said the kind-hearted man—"what is the matter with you?"

"I am getting blind, sir—I can hardly see now, and I don't know what to do."

"Come in my office for a minute."

In a short time he removed the cataract from each eye, thus restoring the poor lad to the glorious light of day, and usefulness.

"Docthor," exclaimed a poor Irishman, "I am mightily throubled about that little bill I've owed you nigh a twelvemonth come Easter."

"Are you, John," laughing at the perplexity of his debtor—"well, I am not. Give yourself no uneasiness about the matter—or rather, give the money to your wife when you get it."

"God bless you, docther, for a raal gintleman—but niver a one of me will ever know an hour's pace of mind until I am able to settle wid you. Och, but you're the kind docther intirely!"—[Phil. City Item.

WAR.—Voltaire thus expresses himself on the subject of war:—'A hundred thousand mad animals, whose heads are covered with hats, advance to kill, or to be killed, by the like number of their fellow mortals covered with turbans. By this strange procedure they want, at best, to decide whether a tract of land to which none of them lays any claim, shall belong to a certain man whom they call Sultan, or to another whom they call Czar, neither of whom ever saw, or will see, the spot so furiously contended for; and very few of those creatures, who thus mutually butcher each other, ever beheld the animal for whom they cut each other's throat's! From time immemorial this has been the way of mankind almost all over the earth. What an excess of madness is this! and how deservedly might a superior being crush to atoms this earthly ball, the bloody nest of such ridiculous murderers!"

A GRAMMATICAL PUPIL.—A country pedagogue in the neighborhood of Cuckney, the other day, after giving one of his pupils a sound drubbing for speaking bad grammar, sent him to the other end of the room to inform another boy that he wished to speak to him, and at the same time promising to repeat the dose if he spoke ungrammatically: the youngster being quite satisfied with what he had got, determined to be exact, and thus addressed his fellow pupil: 'There is a common substantive, of the masculine gender, singular number, nominative case, and in an angry mood, that sits perched upon the eminence at the other end of the room: wishes to articulate a few sentences to you in the present tense.'

RECIPE FOR A ROUT.—Take all the ladies and gentlemen you can collect, and put them into a room with a slow fire. Stew them well. Have ready twelve packs of cards, a pianoforte, a handful of prints or drawings, and put them in from time to time. As the mixture thickens, sweeten with politesse, and season with wit, if you have any, if not, flattery will do, and is very cheap. When all have stewed well for an hour, add some ices, jellies, cakes, lemonade, and wines: the more of the ingredients you put in the more substantial will your route be. Fill your room quite full, and let the scum run off!

CHARITY.—"I fear," said a country curate to his flock. "When I explained to you, in my last charity sermon, that philanthropy was the love of our species, you must have misunderstood me to say specie, which may account for the smallness of the collection. You will prove, I hope, by your present contribution, that you are no longer laboring under the same mistake."
