

Trains Move After Strike Ends

strike. The machinists headed a plea by union Chairman Frank J. Balistreri and disbanded their picket lines at about 8:25 a.m.

Kenneth S. Jaworski, general chairman of District Five of the IAM, had threatened to keep his district on strike, but today backed down from his threat and told his men to return to work. The district includes sections of Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas and Illinois.

Jaworski claimed the return to work order was "unconstitutional" and said the legislation was "taking our freedom away from us that was given years back under the Railroad Labor Act."

Some spots along the Seaboard Coastline at Raleigh, N.C., were still being picketed today.

Most of the rest of the railroads appeared to be returning to normal operations today and many had reported normal schedules shortly after dawn.

Up to 95 per cent of the industry was still by the strike, idling at least 69 of the nation's 76 major railroads and 700,000 railroad employees.

U.S. District Court Judge Frank Wilson at Chattanooga, Tenn., today issued a temporary injunction against the shopcraft unions ordering them back to work on the Southern Railway System. A spokesman for the railroad said its employees began reporting to work.

Commuter lines in Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Boston and San Francisco were reported back in operation and on schedule for the most part.

Cross-country passenger service was slower in starting, but many of the railroads reported normal schedules and operations by mid-morning.

Mail deliveries bottled up by the strike were reported moving again today as post offices eased embargoes that had been placed on everything but first class mail.

L & N Strikers Return to Jobs

Pensacola Postmaster H. W. Brosnahan said at mid-morning that he had been ordered to remove the embargo placed against some surface mail Sunday.

Postal authorities had told postmasters across the country to refuse second, third and fourth class mail headed for distances of more than 150 miles.

Brosnahan said the embargo had caused no difficulties here and that there was no backlog in the mail affected by the embargo.

Frisco officials said shortly before 11 a.m. that employees had returned to work and "things are getting to normal." L&N Asst. Supt. C. B. Mathews said that workmen were returning to the job and that trains halted here by the strike would be running immediately.

However, he reported, it might take "two to three days" to get traffic back to normal.

Both National and Eastern Airlines said the strike had not appreciably affected freight or passenger traffic in and out of Pensacola.

Rail Dispute Panel Selected

George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO; former Republican Sen. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts; and Theodore Kheel, veteran mediator who had a key part in rail negotiations in 1964.

Johnson announced creation of the panel at a hastily called news conference. He said he assumed the members would tackle the problem right away.

The board will administer provisions of the anti-strike legislation that Congress rushed to passage Monday. The law ordered striking members of six shopcraft unions to return to their jobs for a 90-day period during which new efforts will be made to engineer an agreement on a new contract.

Should those efforts fail, the workers would be kept on their jobs until Jan. 1, 1969 under a form of compulsory arbitration. Previous mediation in the dispute involving 85 per cent of the nation's rail service, have gone for naught.

U.S. Appeals For Exchange

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House has appealed to Communist North Vietnam and the Viet Cong for an exchange of sick and wounded war prisoners and for neutral inspection of prison camp conditions.

Some 180 Americans are known prisoners of the Communists and several hundred others listed as missing may also be captives.

"We are gravely concerned that some of these prisoners may not be treated humanely," the White House said in issuing the appeal Monday.

The Viet Cong and Hanoi claim that U.S. prisoners are properly treated, but this cannot be verified because neutral observers from such organizations as the International Committee of the Red Cross have not been allowed by the Communists to visit their camps, the White House said.

"The United States calls on the National Liberation Front and North Vietnam to permit inspection of all prisoners," the appeal said, "and urges them to repatriate those sick and wounded prisoners who qualify for repatriation under the (Geneva) convention."

Scattered Showers

Showers and thundershowers are forecast Tuesday night in portions of the northern and southern plains and southern plateaus.

The rest of the nation can expect generally clear skies. It will be cooler in portions of the northern plains.

Another Vietnam In Thailand?

Terrorists creep into a sleeping village and kidnap its chief. American "advisors" try to teach Asian people how to use modern weapons. It sounds like South Vietnam of five years ago. But it is Thailand today, and what is happening there may determine whether it will become America's next Vietnam. The situation is viewed by a UPI team in a three-part series beginning in Wednesday's Pensacola News.

Demolition Expert Wounded by 'Mines'

The discs, with plastic bubbles on each side, were undergoing joint Army-Air Force testing at Eglin for use in Vietnam.

They were dumped in what was considered an emergency salvo area in the bay and their presence became known Sunday after several of the discs washed onto beaches.

Donald Spinelli, 24, of Fort Walton Beach, received hand and eye injuries Sunday after he tried to pull one of the devices apart with his hands.

Military and civilian personnel combed the bay beaches Sunday and Monday and recovered many of the "mini-mines." They resumed the search today.

Brady participated in Sunday's search and reportedly was injured Monday near Eglin's Range 52 where he had taken the "mini-mines" to dispose of them.

Air Force spokesmen said that one of the small discs had about the same explosive qualities as an old fashioned fireworks "cherry" bomb.

About 6,000 of the "mini-mines" reportedly were in a canister which was dumped by the plane Saturday.

Although bay beaches were re-opened to the public Monday, including the city's beach on Santa Rosa Island, swimmers were cautioned against handling the devices.

Britain Plans Troop Pull-Out In Far East of Suez for a while longer.

But the white paper said Britain would cut its armed forces by 75,000 and abolish its entire aircraft carrier force by the middle of the 1970s.

In Washington U.S. officials said they were concerned about the psychological impact such an announcement by Britain would have among friendly nations in Asia.

Informed sources said the outbreak reflected both Britain's concern over the economy and its emphasis on future cooperation with European countries.

The U.S. officials said that such a long-range projection of force levels would be somewhat unrealistic since Britain had no way of knowing what might happen in Asia in the intervening years to alter its strategy.

The white paper said half of the British troops now in Singapore and Malaysia would be cut by 1971. The government said it expects to save about $800 million annually from its cuts in the armed forces.

The paper also touched on Britain's previously announced plan to pull out 5,000 of its present 50,000-man army of the Rhine in West Germany.

It said that "since a Soviet attack in Europe is unlikely in present circumstances," some of the British forces now in Germany could be held elsewhere provided they could be returned promptly in a crisis. Elsewhere was taken to mean back in Britain.

FEA Asks More NEA Sanctions

TALLAHASSEE (AP) — The Florida Education Association Monday asked the one-million member National Education Association to impose additional national sanctions on Florida. The move was in protest to what the FEA termed the State Legislature's inadequate program on education.

"There has been no significant improvement in education as a result of this session," said Dr. Phil Constans Jr., FEA associate executive secretary. Constans added, "the situation remains essentially the same as it was when the original sanctions were invoked."

At the same time, the FEA urged Gov. Claude Kirk to include the education program in his call for the special legislative session on constitutional revision beginning Monday, July 24.

"If this is not possible," added Constans, "we urge that a special session on education be called immediately after adjournment of the constitutional revision session."

The FEA said the type of sanctions that NEA could impose include:

— Notice to business, industry, government officials and the general public that Florida, despite ample resources, maintains a subminimal public education program.

— Establishment of relocation centers in which teachers in Florida may obtain employment opportunities in other states which offer better teaching conditions.
