The Little White Hearse.

BY BELLA WHEELER WILCOX.
Somebody's baby was buried to-day—
The empty white hearse from the grave rumbled back,
And the morning somehow seemed less smiling and gay.
As I pined on the walk while it crossed on its way,
And a shadow seemed drawn o'er the suns golden track.
Somebody's baby was laid out to rest,
White as a snowdrop and fair to behold.
And the soft little hands were crossed over the breast,
And the hands and the lips and the eyelids were pressed
With kisses as hot as the eyelids were cold.

Somebody saw it go out of their sight
Under the coffin lid out of the door.
Somebody finds only darkness and blight
All through the glory of summer sunlight—
Some one whose baby will wake no more.

Somebody's sorrow is making me weep.
I know not her name, but I echo her cry
For the dearly bought baby she longs so to keep
The baby that rode to its long last sleep
In the little white hearse that went rumbling by.

I know not her name, but her sorrow I know
While I passed on the crossing I lived it once more—
And to my heart surged that river of woe
That but in the breast of a mother can flow—
For the little white hearse has been, too, at my door.

Crabottom Valley shows an excellent prospect for a good crop of wheat this season. We trust it will not be many years until the farmers of Highland will become acquainted with the fact that it is cheaper to raise their own grain than to send out of the county annually about $20,000 for which we get no return.
