Rail Strike Cripples U.S., Emergency Law Is Asked

West and Midwest felt the paralysis first. Then it spread East.

Three of the key rail networks serving the cities of the Eastern Seaboard — the Pennsylvania, New York Central and Erie — Lackawanna — announced they would be out of operation by midnight.

Two of the latest railroads to be struck were the Alton-Southern and the Detroit-Toledo Shore Line.

The strike's effects were sure to be monumental, affecting millions of persons and costing millions of dollars, if the walkout is prolonged. Although the striking International Brotherhood of Machinists had said troop and defense shipments would be allowed to go through, some effect on Vietnam-bound transport seemed certain.

The government acted quickly to ease the effects of the nation's second major rail strike in 16 months.

Embargoes were clamped on second, third and fourth class mail, affecting parcel post, newspapers and advertising. The Interstate Commerce Commission said freight restrictions against trucking firms would be lifted "under emergency authority" to speed defense, health and humanitarian cargoes.

Chicago, the nation's transportation hub, was tied into a knot. Five of the six railroads headquartered in Chicago were out of operation. Travelers descended on bus and airline offices, desperately seeking a way out of the city.

Yet, while trains stood in the years in the West and Middle West, there were few if any reports of strike activity in Atlanta, Boston and New York at mid-morning.

Embargoes on perishable freight and third and fourth class mail were considered a certainty in case of a prolonged strike. Monstrous traffic tieups in such cities as Chicago were expected if the trains fail to run during the Monday morning rush hour.

Although it appeared passenger trains en route when the first pickets appeared were getting through to their destinations, depot after depot reported no new trains were moving out. A spokesman at the Denver Union Station said, "Nothing is moving in or out of Denver."

The Association of American Railroads said lines under strike included the Louisville and Nashville; Chesapeake and Ohio; Baltimore and Ohio, Western Maryland; Reading; New Jersey Central; Santa Fe; Burlington; Missouri Pacific; Terminal of St. Louis; Southern Pacific; Kansas City Southern; Rock Island; North Western; Northern Pacific; Union Pacific; Fort Worth and Denver; Milwaukee Road; Great Northern; Denver and Rio Grande Western; Toledo Peoria and Western; Collingswood Yard of the New York Central; Western Pacific; Portland Terminal Co.; and Kansas City Terminal.

Marines Sweep New Offensive Against Cong

SAIGON (UPI)—Thousands of American Marines swept through bloody battlefields just south the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) Sunday in a new offensive described as disappointing. The push began with an invasion feint into the DMZ that commanders hoped would confuse North Vietnamese troops.

The sweep, code name "Hickory II," was launched last Friday but it was not announced by American headquarters until Sunday for reasons of security. U.S. forces have invaded the DMZ twice in recent weeks.

The U.S. Command said contact through Sunday afternoon had been scattered. Sixty nine North Vietnamese were reported killed in skirmishes that cost the lives of four Marines and wounded 65 others.

The heaviest fighting was a 10-hour battle Saturday when Marines from an amphibious tractor battalion clashed with North Vietnamese troops four miles southeast of Gio Linh, an artillery base where U.S. "Long Tom" howitzers fire long-range shells into North Vietnam. One Marine and 25 North Vietnamese were killed in that combat.

Troops of the U.S. 25th Infantry Division clashed for five hours with guerrilla forces in the northern coastal province of Quang Ngai. Twenty-eight Viet Cong were reported killed. Two Americans died and 18 were wounded.

In the air war, U.S. pilots flying jet fighter-bombers through heavy antiaircraft fire flew 102 missions against North Vietnam Saturday, concentrating on rail and highway targets in the southern panhandle as bad weather limited strikes in the Hanoi-Haiphong area.

U.S. headquarters reported that Communist gunners shot down two Navy planes Saturday, a jet Skyhawk and a prop-driven Skyraider. The Skyhawk pilot bailed out and was picked up in the Gulf of Tonkin in a daring helicopter rescue mission under a hail of gunfire, but the airman aboard the Skyraider was listed as missing in action.

The losses Saturday brought to 609 the number of planes listed by the U.S. Command as downed over North Vietnam since the first raids were staged more than two years ago.

Two accidents of war were reported Sunday.

Two artillery shells fired by units of the 2nd Brigade of the U.S. 1st Infantry Division fell short near Bien Hoa, 10 miles northeast of Saigon, killing one American and wounding three others. South Vietnamese soldiers in the area suffered "light" casualties, headquarters said.

In the other accident, canisters of four illumination shells failed to open after they were fired, and two South Vietnamese civilians were killed and a third wounded. Authorities were unable to say whether the victims were hit by the falling shells or if the shells exploded when they hit the ground.

Guns Are Silent Along Suez Canal

Israeli newspapers said the pilot told the Israelis he had received his training in the Soviet Union and had returned to Egypt last year. He said Egypt had received many new plans from the Soviet Union recently, Maariv said.

Israeli jets knocked out the Egyptian ari force in the early hours of the Middle East war.

But Egyptian planes played a major role in the weekend fighting, indicating the Egyptian air force was getting back into shape. But Egyptian planes played a major role in the weekend fighting, indicating the Egyptian air force was getting back into shape.

The Egyptians claimed they shot down five Israeli planes Saturday in aerial combat over the Suez Canal. The newspaper Al Ahram of Cairo said one pilot had movie film of one Israeli plane he shot down. Israel said none of its planes was lost.

There were these other developments:

Eglin Drops Explosive Devices

—were dangerous. At least two persons were injured when they picked up the disc-like devices here Sunday.

Navy divers searched throughout the night for the discs after they fell from an airplane Saturday.

The search is in Okaloosa, Santa Rosa and Walton Counties.

Some of the discs washed ashore Sunday at Fort Walton Beach.

First public knowledge of the loss of the "mini-mines" came when Donald Spinelli, 24, of Fort Walton Beach, was treated for hand and eye injuries after he tried to pull one of the discs apart with his fingers.

The discs are the size of quarters, with plastic knobs protruding from the sides. When squeezed or stepped on, the discs explode with a report as loud as a large firecracker.

Military spokesman said the explosion would be painful, but would not mutilate a hand or foot.

The discs were being used during Air Force and Army training exercises at Eglin Air Force Base.

One airman, wearing combat boots for protection, stepped on a "mini-mine" and said: "It stung like crazy."

An Eglin spokesman said the search area is from Navarre to 20 miles east of Destin.

One hundred airmen from Eglin joined in the search Sunday aftrnoon.

The small discs were being tested in secret for use as a new warning device in Vietnam.

An Air Force spokesman said security on the devices had been "sensitive."

The discs are about the size of quarters, with clear plastic "bubbles" on each side, the Air Force reported.

An Eglin spokesman said the main search for the discs was called off at sunset Sunday, but said "a precautionary patrol" was to work throughout the night, patroling area beaches.

He said two strips of beaches on Santa Rosa Island are being searched.

Several hundred of the devices were found after they washed ashore near Fort Walton Beach Sunday afternoon.

The devices reportedly were to be scattered around military posts in combat areas in hopes the explosions would warn of anyone trying to sneak into the area.

He siad they had been dropped under emergency conditions, but would not elaborate.

The officer said the discs "were classified" and did not want to discuss the security matter.

"They're new to me," the officer said, "we've never seen one around here.

Doctors Fail On Boy's Arm

TAMPA (AP) — A team of Tampa doctors has failed to sew the severed right forearm back on a 14-year-old boy injured in a hit and run accident.

"But he's going to be all right," said Dr. Cernest Itkin, the surgeon who guided the operation on Dana Brooks Trobert.

Itkin and two other doctors worked more than two hours but gave up because rejoining the severed arm was "impossible," Itkin said.

Trobert also suffered a fractured collarbone and fractured knee in the accident Saturday. He was struck down in front of a dairy on U.S. 301 outside of Tampa, the Highway Patrol reported.

Sgt. Jerry Britsch said the youth was hit by a black 1957 Chevrolet that sped away without slowing down. A car following pursued it but could not catch up, he said.

Sniper Fire Erupts Again in Newark

Half this city of 400,000 remained under siege. But downtown, traffic moved normally and in peaceful parks in the city's center, whites and Negroes sat, strolled and mingled without incident.

Intermittent showers sprinkled New Jersey's largest metropolis during the dark early hours Sunday, but the sun broke through clouds in the afternoon.

Police and National Guardsmen, weary after four successive nights of rioting and shooting, answered every sniper's bullet with a hail of lead from revolvers, rifles and machine guns. More ammunition had to be obtained from police in neighboring towns.

Gov. Richard J. Hughes went on national television to report that calm had settled over the ravished, littered streets except for "a criminal and subversive element" — perhaps as few as 20 or 25 persons — continuing the rebellion against law and order.

He said it was likely some bodies may still lie undetected inside buildings or on rooftops.

The governor, with Newark Mayor Hugh J. Addonizio by his side, again promised clemency to any rioter who informs on snipers — an offer made before dawn — but acknowledged he had no immediate takers.

There is no general amnesty," said Hughes, "and there will be none as long as I am governor. The law will take its stern course with these people."

Police already have arrested more than 1,600, including many juveniles. Hundreds remain in custody in lockups throughout the city Sunday because of failure to raise bonds ranging from $500 to $10,000.

Worshipers in Negro slum churches heard their ministers appeal for law and order. Congregations were about half normal and one churchman said, "Most people are just staying home, they're afraid to talk out on those streets with shooting still going on."

"We hope that police will see the light and the necessity of adhering to the principles of divine order and law," sermonized the Rev. B. Collidge Burton of the Israel Memorial AME church.

Food was short in the worst riot section, the mile-square Central Ward around Springfield Avenue, and the governor prevailed upon supermarkets to open specially to help starving families. The Red Cross and the YMCA in neighborning Orange also rushed in supplied of food and medicines.

Hughes and Addonizio implied that though the rioting itself may not have been deliberately planned, there appeared to be "some organization and some coordination" by snipers.

They hinted, too, that outsiders also were involved. Addonizio said he believed that many guns were brought into the city "in some way" and urged police to consider searching every car that enters Newark.

Hughes said a national firearms control bill is urgently needed — that if a presidential assassination and previous acts of violence in other cities hadn't spurred Congress "maybe what happened in Newark will."

While trigger-ready soldiers and police checked building after building in the dangerous sniper search, firemen raced around the city — even outside the Negro sections — fighting blazes set by rioters.

Among those killed by snipers was a white fire captain, shot down as he climbed a ladder Saturday night to help fight a home fire. After that guardsmen with rifles ready rode fire trucks.

This death, as well as others before it, incensed Hughes. He told a predawn conference that Newark was in the grip of "a criminal insurrection by people who say they hate the white man but who really hate America."

Robert Curvin, an official of the Congress of Racial Equality countered, "Police are actually rioting against the people."

He declared that in Newark, unlike other cities, there hasn't been any mass marching down streets.

"The dissatisfaction and tension in this city is so personal and so high that the people can almost act alone, or in twos or threes," Curvin said.

As a Sabbath calm settled over Newark, the mayor said the city will continue to replace substantard housing, one of the chief complaints of Negroes.

But Addonizio insisted that the city's slums have been chopped in half since 1960, and said, "You don't build houses overnight."

Hughes urged a change in plans for a proposal national conference on power" scheduled to start this Thursday in Newark. The date and place had been chosen long before the rioting sacked this industrial city, 15 miles north of New York.

"If you tried to find a worse time, a worse place for such a conference," said Hughes, "you couldn't find it."

He said he had been told the date could not be changed, but the location could be altered if somebody would pay the bills to cancel Newark arrangements. But he said he would not try to forbid the meeting.

Hughes discounted for the present the bringing in of federal marshals to supplement police and soldiers. Both he and the mayor indicated that present manpower was sufficient.

There are roughly 5,000 National Guardsmen mobilized, but only about half are on duty at one time. The city's 1,400-member police force is on a 12-hour schedule for the duration of the emergency.

3 Teenagers Arrested In 20 Area Breakins

Escambia County sheriff's investigators and deputies reported they arrested three Negro juveniles and a 17-year-old boy in connection with 20 breaking and entering cases.

Investigator Don Powell said that Deputy Harold Young and reserve Deputy Don Grant nabbed three juveniles Saturday night when a burglar alarm sounded at the Pensacola Mill Supply, 3030 North E St.

Powell said the juveniles used a key to the door of the establishment to gain entrance. The key was stolen in a previous burglary of the business, he said.

Powell had been investigating the burglary since the key was reported missing. The juveniles are charged with breaking and entering and petty larceny at Pensacola Mill Supply Co. (two counts), at Pensacola High School on June 12, June 20, June 25, July 1, July 3 and July 5, and at the Cerebral Palsy Clinic on North E St. on June 9, June 12, June 26, July 4 and July 15, and a warehouse rented by the Coca Cola Bottling Co. at 2675 N. Palafox St.

Powell said other arrests are pending.

Investigator Marco White said Freddie Spires, 17, has been charged in 11 breaking and entering cases. He was arrested by Deputy Houston Harris Saturday night.

Spires is charged with breaking into the L.A. Club, 1623 W. Scott St., on April 18; Foremost Dairy, 2816 N. Pace Blvd. on April 30; petty larceny from the Janell Co. on Fairfield Drive on April 30; the Family Hobbie Center on Fairfield Drive May 2; the L.A. Club again on May 4; Horne's Barbecue in Olive Heights on May 4; Oak Tavern in Olive Heights on May 5; the Janell Co. again on May 31; Wedgewood Junior and Senior High Schools on July 14; Foremost Dairy again on July 14 and the Family Hobby Center again on July 14.

The juveniles were referred to juvenile authorities, and Spires is in the county jail.

Italians Vote No to Freeing Nazi Criminal

MARZABOTTO, Italy (AP) — Survivors of the worst Nazi massacre in Italy voted Sunday not to forgive or free the German officer whose troops slaughtered nearly 1,800 people in reprisal killings here during World War II.

Two hundred and eighty-eight residents of this rural area 16 miles outside Bologna cast ballots in the town cinema in a referendum without precedent in postwar history.

Two hundred and eighty-two of them voted "no" to the request of Maj. Walter Reder, that they forgive him for the killings so that he might be freed from his prison cell in Gaeta, in southern Italy, to be with his aged mother.

Between Sept. 29 and Oct. 2, 1944, SS — Elite Guard — troops under Reder systematically killed about 300 men, women and children of Marzabotto to quell the Italian partisan resistance in this strongly pro-Communist area.

Last month Reder, now 50, and serving a life sentence since 1951, sent a plea for forgiveness to Marzabotto's Communist mayor Giovanni Bottonelli.

Reder had been told earlier by justice officials that a pardon would be considered only if the survivors of Marzabotto voted for it by forgiving his crimes.

Other victims were killed in outlying communities, some of which have ceased to exist.

Man Reported Missing Here

Herbert Manning, 52, of 313 N. Alcaniz St., has been reported missing by his wife, Mrs. Mary Anne Manning.

Mrs. Manning told the sheriff's office she last saw her husband on the morning of July 4 when he left home in his car, a white, 1958 Plymouth Savoy.

Mrs. Manning said her husband was wearing grey trousers, a blue sport hat and white shirt. He is five feet, nine inches tall, weighs about 160 pounds and has blue eyes and grey hair.

SWEET AND SOUR

Relish-salad has a sweet-sour dressing made by mixing and chilling the following: 1 cup each of canned mandarin orange segments, drained, and slivered green pepper, cored and seeded, ¼ cup of light corn syrup, 3 tablespoons each of salad oil and white vinegar, 2 tablespoons of soy sauce and ¼ to ½ teaspoon of salt. At mealtime, chop enough chilled iceberg lettuce to measure 2 quarts. Toss lettuce with dressing. Makes about 6 cups, because the liquid makes the lettuce pack down and take up less space than crisp lettuce.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

by Robert E. Keyes

A student in one of the large universities laments the loss of personal recognition. The student is given a number, known by a number, recognized by a number; seldom by name or as a person. In the complexities of modern civilization, all of us live in an age of numbers.

Birth, scholastic, employment, marriage, death and social security records are kept by numbers. The glamor of numbers even include a zip code for mail you receive or send. Our living in an age of numbers and computers is part of the price we pay for the questioned luxury of growth.

Gone are the days when, for example, someone mailed a letter to Mark Twain, addressed - "The Lord knows where" - and got a reply, "He does." And this brings up an important realization. God, the creator of heaven and earth, needs no numbers to identify His children of the past and present. The prophets and psalmists of yesteryear, the ministers, priests, rabbis, leaders and laymen of today, as well as you and your family are known to Him as persons. He knows who you are, where you are and what you are doing. Much joy in living is lost when He is denied accessibility and approachability in personal daily needs . . .
